Utah Adoptive Parents’ Perspectives on Openness in Adoptions

Lee Raby, PhD
Assistant Professor, Developmental Psychology
University of Utah
Openness in Adoptions

- Umbrella term
  - One component is communication between a child’s birth and adoptive family

- Since the 1970s, there has been a dramatic shift in the rates of openness in domestic infant adoptions
  - A nationally representative survey from 2009 reported that 95% of adoptions were open to some degree

- Open adoptions are expected to be associated with positive outcomes for all members of the adoption triad
Research Questions

1. How prevalent is openness among recent adoptions in Utah?
2. How satisfied are adoptive parents with openness arrangements?
3. Is openness related to adoptive parents’ satisfaction with adoption?
4. How can adoption professionals promote openness in adoptions?
Our Approach

• Adoptive parents were invited to complete an online survey (www.UtahAdoptionSurvey.com)

• Eligibility criteria
  1. Live in Utah or completed the adoption in Utah
  2. Adoption occurred in 2018 or later
  3. Child was less than 12 months old at the time of placement
  4. Involved an agency or lawyer (not foster care)
Adoptive Family Characteristics

• 110 families

• Characteristics reflected nationwide trends regarding adoptive parents and demographic characteristics of Utah families
How frequent is openness among recent Utah adoptions?
Nearly 95% of Utah adoptions are open

- Birth mother: 94% Open, 6% Closed
- Birth father: 25% Open, 75% Closed
There is substantial variability in the amount and type of contact with birth mothers.
How satisfied are adoptive parents with openness arrangements?
Most adoptive parents are satisfied with the amount of openness with birth mothers.

- Very satisfied: 41%
- Somewhat satisfied: 22%
- Neutral: 21%
- Somewhat dissatisfied: 11%
- Very dissatisfied: 5%
Adoptive parents who are dissatisfied often desire more contact with birth mothers.
Is openness related to adoptive parents’ satisfaction with adoption?
Parents with open adoptions are more likely to report being satisfied with adoption.

- Somewhat dissatisfied: 75% (Open: 75%)
- Somewhat satisfied: 90% (Open: 90%)
- Very satisfied: 97% (Open: 97%)
How can adoption professionals promote openness in adoptions?
Collaborative decision-making is likely to lead to openness with birth mothers.

- Negotiation among parties: 98% Open
- Adoptive parents decided: 100% Open
- Birth parent decided: 89% Open, 11% Closed
- Organization decided: 75% Open, 25% Closed
Summary and Conclusions

1. Open adoptions currently are the norm in Utah.

2. Most adoptive parents are satisfied with openness arrangements or desire more contact.

3. Adoptive parents with open adoptions are more likely to report being satisfied with their adoption experience.

4. Encouraging collaborative decision-making about openness arrangements is associated with openness soon after placement.
Future Directions

1. How do openness arrangements and/or satisfaction with openness change over time?
2. How does openness influence adopted children?
Our Community Partners